BEFORE MR. A. G. WISE.

A YOUNG SAVAGE. Mak A Ng. a boy of ten yours, was charged with having out and wounded a boy named Mai Amui, and assaulted another boy named Ng Afat

The defendant went up to one of the boys, and anded some cash of it, and when this was refused him he struck the boy. He then made a similar demand to the other boy, who also refused and walked away, whereupon the defendant went up behind him, and made a slash at him with a knife, cutting his clothes all down the back, and giving him a nasty cut which was dressed at the Civil Hospital. The defendant said he lived in Tank Land and had neither father nor mother. He denied committing the offcuce.

Sentenced to six months' hard labour.

Li Akan, hawker, was charged with obtaining food by manus of false pretences on the 20th 22nd, and 28th ult.

The defendant went to the Hop Fat shop in Lower Lascar Row on the dates mentioned and had a meal each time. In payment he tendered a pucket of broken silver on each eccasion to presenting it to be good, and received change. It was subsequently found that about two thirds of the contents of each macket was bad. The defendant said he was not aware there was any base metal in the packets. Sentenced to tea days' hard labour.

ENCROACHMENT.

Ng Akue was charged by Inspector Thomson with trespassing on Government Ground at Tai Kok Tsni by erecting a matched there. The defendant admitted the offence, and was given time to pull down the hut. This he failed to do, and the police were ordered to pull it down at the defendant's expense.

Ng Awing, barber, was charged with having assaulted a goodie naturd To Pa Tsai on the Rade Course on the 27th ult. The two men were gambling with dice, and the defendant lost to the complainant, but refused to pay. A quarrel ensued which the defendant brought to a termination by taking out in from bur and striking the complainant on the head. The latter was knocked down, and while on the ground the defendant beat him again. The complement was rather badly hurt. The defendant was sent to gaol for a month's hard labour. ASSAULT BY A CONSTABLE.

P.C. Delel Khan, No. 580, appeared before the Court, on remand, to a summons charging him with having assaulted a watchman named Chau Doo Khan with intent to do him grievous bodily harm, and causing actual bodily harm, on the

Mr. Bowles, from the office of Messrs. Wotton and Deacon, appeared for the complainant. The complainant alleged that on the 17th ult he went to the Police Station to get his meal, with his brother, who was a constable there. He was having a wash when the defendant came up behind him, and without a word, or provocation of any kind, he belaboured complainant about the back, shoulders, and head with a piece of wood, knocking him down insensible. The defendant alloyed that the complainant was the aggressor, and commenced by interfering with him as he was doing some cooking work, and then, taking from him a stick he was smoking spices with, he endeavoured to strike defendant. He defended himself with a Chinese broom and the complainant grappled with him. They fell, and in falling the complainant struck his head on the pavement. Several witnesses were called on either side, whose evidence was very conflicting, and Dr. river at midday. Wharry said that when the complainant was brought to the Civil Hospital he pretended to be great deal worse than be really was. He had a contused wound on the head of a trifling character, and was well able to walk although he pretended to be unable to do so. The defendant was convicted and fined $10 and bound over in $25, personal recognisances, to

The sampan | For conturies the main caravan route, " the gold and silver road," as it has been called till we are weary of the title, between Burmah and Western China, has been that over the hills from Barnaw along the valley of the Tapeng river. Theebaw's casual way of collecting revenue, the main feature of which was the lovying of the poll tax two or three times in the twelvemonth, whenever ceipts, and his utter inability to keep the hill On the other hand the launch people alleged tribes in order, have weefully reduced the commercial importance of the last place which the Irrawaddy flotilla steamers call at. Things came to such a pass that just a year ago Bamaw was move somewhere else, and he would not even after actually seized by a combined band of Kachingthat is more phonetic, if not so scientific, as Kukyons-and brigand Chinamon, supposed to be acting under the orders of Li Si-tai, the mard rec of Margary. Then the Kachins murched off to their hills and the Chinamen made their way back to Manwyne. But Bamaw did not regain its trade. Now it will, but the question, rather needlessly raised as we think, is, who to hold the town? It is a place with European associations almost from the first moment we hear of it. We had a faccentury. Unfortunately, so also had the Dutch. The Burmese King demanded tribute of the merchants, and the Datch not only refused to pay it, but were ill-advised enough to threaten to call in the Chinese to protect them. So little did the King of Burms-then not much larger than it was under King Theebaw-acknowledge the Chinese suzerainty, that he promptly expolled the Hollanders and the English traders I slong with them. The Dutchmen never returned. We have, and it may be hoped it is to stay.

> THE INHABITANTS OF BHAMO. Bamaw lies about one degree within the north temperate zone and is about 900 miles from th sea. It stands high on the left bank of the Irrawaddy, which here is about three-quarters of a mile wide. General Prendergast's telegrame tell us that the steamors have been unable to get within two miles of the town. No doubt the channels have changed, as they do throughout the whole course of the Irrawildy, but it seems curious that the change should have been so complete. Formerly there was a broad and yery Rapid. deep channel just under the town, and the steamers were able to fasten up under the bank. Batween the town and the high range of the Kachin hills extends a plain about twelve miles wide, all cultivable land, but at present covered with bambon jungle, varied by large clamps of the broad-leaved eng tree and the tall, mast-like woodoil tree. Only here and there are a few scattered huts, hedged in by a tangle of eactuses and bamboos, live and dead. The inhabitants hybrids a cross between the Burmers and the Shans of Momeit, over whom the King in vain attempted to exert his authority. They are mostly wood-cutters, and lead a sufficiently miserable life, though under different conditions they might have wide fields of rice or cotton wheat, or mulbarries. As it is, they act as yo betweens in the few negotiations the Kachine and the Burmese have with one another, and are occasionally killed by the one party or the other. while others, perhaps even less lucky, are esten by the tigers, which are extraordinarily abun-of the river valley, in some places as much as The prisoner was sentenced to four months' forty feet in depth. A good deal of silver also -obtained by intermediaries from the Kachins -is cost into bars to be weighed and used as currency. Nevertheless, the Chinamen are the most important people in Bamaw. They ocempy rather a peculiar position. Few or none them are permanent residents, yet they ford it over everybody. The fact is they are the only people in the place who have any money, and moreover a Yunnan or Sau oh'nen Chinaman' is a very sturdy individual and able to hold his own in a fight even with a stalwart Burman. The morehants in Bamaw only come there for a month or two to buy cotton, sent up in bales from Myin-Gyan below Mandalay, or todespatch cargoes of orpiment, tin, silver, or metal pans down to the capital They had to pay heavy blackmail to the Kachins before their caravans were allowed to pass over the hills either to or from China. For this reason the Chinaman of Bamaw was emphatically of opinion that it would be a very good thing if Bamaw fell into English hands. He was convinced that trade would be vastly increased, and a Chinaman cares for nothing but trade. Ho was also persuaded that the trade would remain practically in his hands, and no doubt he was right, for the grenter part of the interior trade even from Rangoon is controlled by the Colostials. The idea that China would even take Bamaw certainly never entered any one's brain three or four years ago, and it is very undesirable that the town should be handed over to them now. The Kachinas own a most satisfactory neutral strip of territory some five and twenty miles wide between ourselves and the nearest point of the Chinese Empire. If the hillmen are well treated they will soon quiet down into more peaceable citizens than they are now. But if China crosses this hill barrier, it will be very lifficult to say where she is to stop. There is no satisfactory natural line which would make a real boundary. It is necessary that we should hold the entire pavigable portion of the Irrawaddy, and to see Peking taxes established at what must negotiations with the King's troops, both certainly become a great entrapht of trade would be in the highest digrae unpleasant. Moreover the railway will almost certainly by immediately pushed on from Tounloo to Mudalay. From Mandalay it will equally naturally, and without great difficulty, be prolonged to Banaw, and this might not base easy a matter if Chinese notious of Fung-shui stapped in. A railway southwards from Dibegarh to Bamaw seems very feasible, and if India is over to be joined by rail with Surmah it must be by this route. It would be most annoying to have this scheme frastruted by decrees of the Tsuar-li-Yamen. An Anglo-Chinese alliance is undoubtedly a most desirable thing, but we can satisfy Chinese claims without sacrificing Burnaw. The so-called Burmase Shan States did not all raject Burmage over-lordship. Those that did will cast about for ome powerful neighbour to protect them as well from one another as from sinister neighbours to the south and east. It was to recover her outhority over these States that China unsuccossfully invaded Barmah a handred years ago. The Shans, if we are to believe Professor Tertien de la Conperie, are practically Chinamen Therefore, instead of giving up Bamaw as has een proposed, it would be much more reasonable resign all control over the Shans to the middle ingdom. Thus we should still "round off our Empire, preserve Barmah intact, and miintain our friendship with China.—Pall Mall Gazette.

In the course of some remarks on the speech of Mr. Gladstone on the occasion of the election of the Speaker, Venity Fire says: - "In his complimentary allusions to the Parnellites, Mr. Gladstone made a mistake in describing them as the Third Party. They are, in fact, the Fourth Party, for it is only by a transparent fiction that the Liberals are described as one party. The real classification of parties in the House of Commons, ranged according to their numerical proportions, is as follows: -- First, Tories; second, Whigs: third, Radicals: fourth, Parnellites. It is only if two or three of these parties coalesce that the Tories can be placed in a minority. Indeed. Mr. Gladstone will be unable to form a Stable Government unless he commands the sup-Port, in addition to his own party, of both the Radicals and the Parnellites. But will England ratify the price Mr. Gladstone will have to pay for their support? That is the question."

EXTRACT.

TO E. E. E. Time has no bounds where love is true, The years that flit on backward wing Have wrought no change, dear one, in you, Nor do their cares around you cling. Your loving hourt is still as young As on that day when first we met, 'Twas yesterday when first you clung Close to my heart! I can't forget When only yesterday it seems Our life began its " Lovo's young dreams." That "old, old story" when its pow'r First dawned upon our wakened hearts, Warmed into life Hope's fairest flow'r With all the vigour it imparts: Yet more than twenty years have flown, With their attendant joy and care,

Since first you were my very own. My wife! my life, my all to share, Still-only yesterday it seems Our life began its " Love's young dreams."
